Comprendre un document de type monologue ou exposé. Entourer la note choisie
Le candidat n'a pas compris le document. Il n'en a repéré que des éléments isolés, sans parvenir à établir de liens entre eux. Il n'a pas identifié le sujet ou le thème du document. It's about California and India, someone who migrated from California to India and lived in a garage.	2
A1 Le candidat est parvenu à relever des mots isolés, des expressions courantes et à les mettre en relation pour construire une amorce de compréhension du document. Le candidat a compris seulement les phrases/les idées les plus simples. eg. This is a news report - a woman is speaking and a man is interviewed. It is about an Indian who came to California and started a website. He speaks about education and working hard.	4
A2 Certaines informations ont été comprises mais le relevé est incomplet, conduisant à une compréhension encore lacunaire ou partielle. eg. This document is a news report - we can hear a woman journalist and a man speaking. It speaks about an Indian migrant who came to California with his head full of ideas and $50 in his pocket. He is a star. Today he runs a leading website (clothes, jewellery other consumer products) . At first he worked out of his garage but it was noisy. He says in the US there are a lot of opportunities to succeed as an individual.	7
B1 Les informations principales ont été relevées. L'essentiel a été compris. Compréhension satisfaisante. eg. This document is about Silicone Valley California, where Indian entrepreneurs are the stars. Manish Chandra came to California on an engineering scholarship and $50 in his pocket. Today he runs 'Kaboodle' leading website for millions of shoppers giving advice on clothes, jewellery, other consumer products. At first he worked out of his garage the only free space he could find, he put a few thousand dollars from his pocket into computers. It was very noisy - his kids would walk in while he was working. (His company has recently been bought by a media conglomerate C1) He says he would never have accomplished this level of success in India, that in the US education and hard work are respected regardless of where you come from. It is this optimism which newcomers bring to their adopted homeland.	10

Transcript:

Silicone Valley in California's bay area - state of the art technology, top-knotch research and the potential to make a fortune if you work hard enough, and 'in the valley', as it is known, Indian entrepreneurs are the undisputable stars. Manish Chandra is one of them. He came to the US on an engineering scholarship his head filled with bright ideas and $50 in his pocket. Today he runs 'Kaboodle' a leading websites for millions of shoppers who want advice on clothes, jewellery and other consumer products. He started the company in the only free space he could find - his garage.

'We went to IKEA and got some really inexpensive furniture and put a few thousand dollars from our pocket into the company - bought some computers and that's where we set up shop. But it was very noisy and the kids would come in in the middle of the day'.

Manisha's company was recently acquired by one of the biggest media conglomerates in the US.

He says he would never have accomplished this level of success had he stayed in India.

'There is a lot of opportunity to succeed as an individual regardless of where you come from. The basics of having an education and working hard are respected and treasured. '

It is precisely this optimism which many newcomers bring with them to their adopted homeland.
